For anyone starting fresh

New to guiding people?

Cosmos Neural Programming cnp.brainmanual.in

Guide clients confidently in days, not years.

You need no background in astrology, psychology or fingerprints. Here are the problems every beginner meets, and how CNP solves each one.

Learning time

"Every system takes years"

Courses ask for years of rules, periods and scoring keys before you can guide anyone.

Learn it in days

CNP keeps the parts few on purpose: eight life areas, and planets that add pace rather than fixed labels. Most people can read the reports after 3 to 4 days of steady study, or about a week at an easy pace, starting with the Basic Training's 38 short video lessons.

The first session

"What do I say first?"

Your first client sits down, and you are not sure where to begin or how deep to go.

Start from the main findings

Every section of the report opens with its main findings, written in full. You begin with the first section and walk your client through their manual: you explain what is written; you never have to invent a reading.

Something to give

Nothing to hand over

A conversation alone can feel thin to a paying client, and it is easily forgotten.

A 51-page manual

Every client receives a written manual in plain English, Hinglish or Hindi, covering personality, learning, work, money, relationships, wellbeing, time and remedies. It adds real weight to your consultation from your very first client.

Set-up costs

No money for machines or a clinic

Scanners, software, test licences and a room add up before you have earned anything.

Birth details only

A phone or laptop is enough. The report is ready at once, and you can meet clients online.

First clients

Your first clients live far away

Friends, relatives and referrals are spread across cities.

Clients anywhere

With the date, time and place of birth alone, you can guide someone in another city or country as easily as someone next door.

Curiosity and care are enough to begin.

How to start

- Basic Training: 38 short video lessons, then read the Basic Report with confidence.
- Add the Foundation and Advanced trainings when you want to go deeper.

CNP is a guide for self-understanding and direction. Use it with your own judgement and, where needed, a qualified professional. No result is guaranteed. Training is not a clinical, medical, psychological, legal or financial qualification.

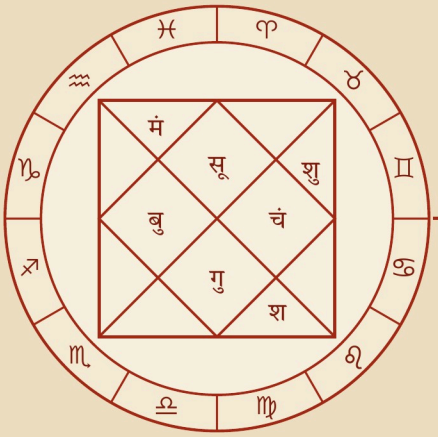

For astrologers

You already read the stars.

For astrologers: in depth

The questions you hear every week.

Cosmos Neural Programming cnp.brainmanual.in

How CNP helps you answer them.

Five situations every astrologer knows, and what CNP adds to your consultation in each. Your reading stays at the centre.

"Fine, but what should I actually do?"

You explain the dasha and the transit. The client nods, then asks what to change at work, with money or at home tomorrow morning.

"What should I do?"

The daily layer

CNP reads the same birth details as the wiring of your client's brain: what they move towards, what drains them, the setting where they work best. Each finding comes with its reason and a practical next step, so your reading ends with clear, everyday actions.

The anxious phone call

A heavy period begins and the phone rings: "Is something bad going to happen?" Fear makes clients stop acting just when they need to act.

Heavy periods

A timetable, not a forecast

CNP never labels a time good or bad. It shows which area of life a stretch is working on and what it asks: a heavier stretch calls for steadiness, a building stretch for creating. You turn the call into a plan: the work to do now, the skills to build and when to review. This is planning, not forecasting.

Before every client

Each consultation needs careful preparation, and a busy day leaves little time for it.

Preparation

Main findings, ready

The report is ready the moment the birth details are entered. Every section opens with its main findings, so you walk in knowing where to begin and spend the consultation on your counsel.

Advice that fades

A week later the client remembers half of what you said, and the family has heard a third version of it.

After the session

A manual they keep

Your client leaves with a 51-page written manual in English, Hinglish or Hindi. The family reads the same words, your guidance stays clear, and the next consultation starts where the last one ended. It adds real weight to what your client takes home.

Remedies some clients won't follow

Many clients value mantras and rituals; some, especially younger ones, also want something practical to do today.

Remedies

Remedies they live

CNP remedies are daily actions that fit your client's pattern and setting: how they work, rest, focus, deal with people and handle money. They sit beside your Vedic remedies, never in place of them.

Your readings stay at the centre. CNP adds the daily layer.

Bring CNP into your week

- Enter the birth details before your client arrives and read the main findings.
- Give your reading as always; use CNP for the daily layer and the timetable.
- Hand over the manual and set the next review by the timetable.

CNP is a guide for self-understanding and direction. Use it with your own judgement and, where needed, a qualified professional. No result is guaranteed. The left column reflects common practice and varies by provider.

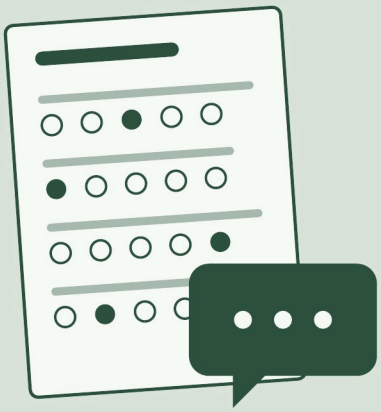

For coaches, counsellors and test users

Your tools read the person.

For coaches and counsellors: in depth

The problems you meet every week.

Cosmos Neural Programming cnp.brainmanual.in

How CNP helps your sessions move faster.

Five situations every coach and counsellor knows, and what CNP adds. Qualified professionals remain essential; CNP is a starting map, not a diagnosis.

Discovery takes sessions

The first two or three meetings go on history, rapport and forms, and the client wonders when the real work begins.

First sessions

A map before you meet

With only the date, time and place of birth, the report is ready before the first session. You walk in knowing how your client tends to think, learn, decide and relate, and can open with the questions that matter.

Answers as they wish to be seen

Clients describe the person they hope to be, or the one they feel like that week. Good tests manage this carefully, but it still shapes the picture.

Self-view

A second lens

CNP reads from the outside in, so a good or bad day does not change it. Set it beside your client's own answers: where the two agree you gain confidence, and where they differ you have your best conversation.

The skill is there; the setting is wrong

A capable client keeps struggling with one boss, one team or one family pattern, and the sessions circle the same story.

The setting

The setting, mapped

CNP reads your client together with their surroundings: the pace, people and pressure where they do their best, and the kind that drains them. You can work on the setting, not only on the person.

Planning stops at the current goal

Once a goal is reached, both of you ask: what next?

Beyond today's goal

A timetable

CNP shows which area of life each stretch of time is working on and what it asks, for the coming months or years. Your coaching gains a long view: the skills to build now and the next point to review. This is planning, not forecasting.

Insights fade by next week

The breakthrough in the room is half forgotten by Thursday, and the homework slips.

Between sessions

A manual to reread

Your client keeps a 51-page manual in plain English, Hinglish or Hindi, with practical daily remedies. They reread it between sessions and arrive prepared, so your time goes to the deeper work.

Qualified professionals remain essential for diagnosis, therapy and deep personal work.

CNP is a guide for self-understanding and direction. Use it with your own judgement and, where needed, a qualified professional. No result is guaranteed. The left column reflects common practice and varies by provider.

Bring CNP into your week

- Generate the report when a client books, and read the main findings first.
- Use it beside your tests and methods, never in place of them.
- Set reviews by the timetable: what the next stretch asks.

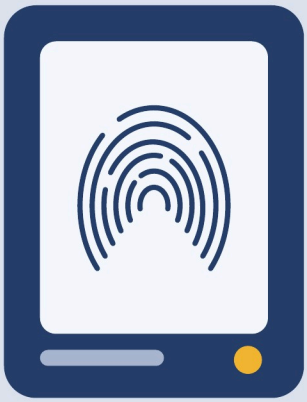

For fingerprint analysts

You already read inborn talent.

For fingerprint analysts: in depth

The questions your clients bring.

Cosmos Neural Programming cnp.brainmanual.in

How CNP helps you answer them.

Five situations every fingerprint analyst knows, and what CNP adds beside your talent reading.

"My report says I'm good at this. Why isn't it working?"

A student or young professional has strong talents on paper, yet marks, interest or results are not coming.

The results gap

Talent in its setting

CNP reads your client together with their surroundings and time: where the setting supports a strength, where it works against it, and what to change: how they study or work, where they work, or what to build first in this stretch.

"What about us?"

Parents sit through their child's session and then ask about their own career, money or marriage.

Parents

Every age

CNP needs only birth details, so you can offer parents and other family members a full report of their own: work, money, relationships, wellbeing and more, in English, Hinglish or Hindi.

Clients you can't scan

Enquiries come from other cities and abroad, but prints need an in-person visit and your equipment.

Distance

Birth details only

The date, time and place of birth are enough. Serve those clients online, and keep your scanner for the sessions where it belongs.

One report, then silence

Many families come once, at a turning point, and the relationship ends with the report.

After the report

Reasons to review

The CNP timetable shows what each stretch of time asks. A new school year, a job change or a new stretch gives the family a natural reason to come back and plan the next step with you. This is planning, not forecasting.

Busy at admission time, quiet after

Work bunches around exams, results and school camps, then slows down.

The season

Work through the year

Adults bring questions all year: a job change, a new business, money decisions, family matters. CNP gives you a way to serve them, beside your student work.

Fingerprint analysis gives a young person a valuable first look at talent.

CNP is a guide for self-understanding and direction. Use it with your own judgement and, where needed, a qualified professional. No result is guaranteed. The left column reflects common practice and varies by provider.

Bring CNP into your week

- Keep your fingerprint reading for talent; add CNP for the setting and time.
- Offer parents their own report during the child's session.
- Take enquiries from other cities with birth details alone.

Why practitioners deliver the CNP manual.

Every practice on the previous pages has real value. CNP adds one practical thing to all of them: a complete written manual of how your client thinks, learns, works and relates.

Three practices, one addition

Astrology

You read the chart and its timing.
CNP adds the daily layer and a written plan.

Tests and coaching

You read the person from the inside out.
CNP adds a map before the first session.

Fingerprint analysis

You read inborn talent.
CNP adds the setting, the timing and every age.

What changes in your practice

1. A deliverable that adds weight
   A conversation is easy to forget. A 51-page manual in your client's language, covering personality, learning, work, money, relationships, wellbeing, time and remedies, gives your consultation lasting substance, and the family reads the same words you used.

2. Faster, deeper sessions
   The main findings are written out before you meet. Less of each session goes to discovery and explanation, and more goes to decisions, practice and the deeper work that only you can do.

3. Natural points of return
   The timetable shows what each stretch of time asks. A new stretch, a job change or a new school year gives your client a clear reason to come back and plan the next step with you, rather than calling only in a crisis.

Time, read as a timetable

CNP never labels a time good or bad. Like a college timetable, it shows which area of life each stretch is working on and what it asks of your client: a heavier stretch calls for steadiness, a building stretch for creating and growing. You and your client get the work to do, the skills to build and a plan for the months or years ahead. This is planning, not forecasting.

What CNP is

Cosmos Neural Programming is a brain architecture and neural operating manual. From a birth date, time and place, it maps how a person thinks, learns, works, earns and relates, then turns that map into clear direction and practical action. Percentages show tendencies, not limits.

How it works

1. Birth details. Date, time and place of birth.
2. One model. The same rules for every person keep the core result consistent.
3. A written manual. Findings, reasons and actions, ready for your session.
